Dartmouth Linguists Remap Boundary Between East, West

07/03/12 5:50PM By Charlotte Albright

Ever noticed how some people "park" their car and others "pahk" it? Or how some people have ideas, and others have idea-rs?

Many speech habits get passed down through generations. But researchers from Dartmouth are finding that linguistic patterns in northern New England are taking surprising twists and turns.

VPR/Charlotte Albright

Dartmouth Linguistics Professor James Stanford displays a map of speech patterns in the Upper Valley and beyond.